Man found dying on freezing street

MYSTERY still surrounds the death of a man in his 70s found lying in a freezing street in the early hours of Sunday morning.

John Smith, 77, lived in a flat at Duddery Court, Haverhill, close to the area of Duddery Road which Suffolk Police cordoned off after finding him there at around 3.30am.

Officers were called to the scene by the ambulance service, which was tending to the man. He was taken to Addenbrooke's, where he was pronounced dead.

Brian Wheaton, 42, of Larks Close, Haverhill, works as a barman and steward at Haverhill Ex-Serviceman's Club, where Mr Smith was a member. He said Mr Smith had worked at IFF in Haverhill for 25 years, but after his wife died around 15 years ago, he became a bit of a loner.

Brian said: "The police could not tell me anything because I am not close family, but he did not have any family really. I think he had a brother, who is probably somewhere in London. I used to keep an eye on him and there was a lady who did his laundry.

"As far as I know, we are the only two people who have come forward. I think she was a friend of his wife's and tried to help him out. I think she identified him and I would like to contact her to see if I can help arrange his funeral.

"I just kept an eye on him from time to time. Since his wife died he did not really mix with people and was a little bit lonely. I used to take him the club with me when I was working sometimes, so that he would not be at home on his own. I have

No one hurt as cars end up in ditch on icy country road

ICY: Two drivers had a lucky escape from a ditch after the accident in Withersfield

Picture by Keith Jones

TWO drivers were lucky to escape injury after ending up in a ditch on the same country road.

Attempts were being made yesterday to remove the vehicles from the ditch in Skipper's Lane, Withersfield.

Icy conditions continued to make the stretch of road between the villages of Withersfield and West Wratting treacherous. The two vehicles both came off the road in snowy conditions between 4pm and 11pm on Sunday.

Anyone who witnessed the accident or has any information about it should contact Cambridgeshire Police on 101.

Walk to ease school chaos, parents urged

jo.deeks@cambridge-news.co.uk

MUMS and dads taking their children to school are being urged to consider walking or at least parking more carefully to keep youngsters safe.

The issue of the traffic bottleneck at Burton End in Haverhill was agreed as a policing priority at a recent meeting in the town, along with people parking on pavements and grass verges.

Congestion at the junction with School Lane is a big part of the problem in Burton End, with queues of cars forming as parents drive in and out to drop off or pick up their children.

Recently appointed police community support officer Kayla Packman has been patrolling the area. She said thoughtless parking, especially by mothers, was also causing problems in neighbouring streets including The Causeway, with cars regularly blocking in driveways.

As well as causing a nuisance, this was also dangerous to children in the area – and she issued a plea for parents to act to ease the problem.

She said: "We are absolutely desperate in Haverhill for people to perhaps walk their children to school and leave their cars at home. When I am there, everyone is wonderful, but as soon as I leave they just go back to parking everywhere, including on double yellow lines. I can't be there very day, there are other things I need to be doing."

"There is a massive car park at the top of the hill which is only about two minutes' walk away. A lot of them park up at least 15 minutes beforehand, so they would have plenty of time. School mothers are notorious for bad parking and I cannot understand it. It is a child safety issue and it is their own children they are putting at risk."

PC Michael Potter said talks were going on with developers hoping to build houses on the former Castle Hill school site to see if changes could be made to help reduce congestion at the junction.

He said: "We just want to encourage people to act more responsibly before we go up there and start issuing tickets, because that will not solve the problem."

Police are also tackling the issue of parking on verges, working with Havebury Housing on the Chalkstone estate to look for alternative space in empty garages or access roads.

PC Potter reminded motorists that double yellow lines cover all the land between the road and the edge of nearby property, so parking on a verge there is the same as parking on a double yellow line. Survey work is planned by Suffolk County Council to assess the problem of lorries in residential streets.

Residents 'distraught' at man's death

taken him home and put him to bed after he had a few drinks. He was very well known in the town, he just shut himself off from people. Last year he went away for four days without telling me and I was really worried about him.

"I always walked past his flat on my way home and I used to see him sitting in the window. I walked past at about 1am on Saturday, and there was no light on or any sign of him. When I heard on the news it was a man in his 70s, I knew it must be him. I have had a migraine ever since thinking about what could have happened to him."

Former Haverhill mayor Maureen Byrne, who lives in nearby Duddery Hill, said: "There has been a lot about it on Facebook and I think most people were absolutely distraught about it. We don't know exactly what happened, but he could have been taken ill and not found until 3.30am.

"What ever the circumstances, the residents who have spoken to just think it is so, so sad that he was not found until 3.30am and nobody knows how long he had been lying there."

Temperatures in Haverhill on Saturday night dipped below freezing and snow was falling.

A police spokesman said they were treating the death of the man, as "unexplained", but there were not thought to be any suspicious circumstances. The coroner has been informed and a post-mortem examination will be carried out in due course to establish the cause of death. Officers continue to try to identify and contact the man's next of kin.

Anyone who was in the area of Duddery Road in the early hours of Sunday morning and may have information can call Suffolk Police on 101.

'Girly' Army medic is honoured for bravery

jo.deeks@haverhillweeklynews.co.uk

A YOUNG Army medic from Haverhill who put her patients before her own safety – coming under attack in Afghanistan on her first ever patrol – has received a bravery award.

Lance Corporal Abbie Martin, of the Royal Army Medical Corps, was awarded a Queen's Commendation for Valuable Service (QCVS) for her actions in treating a wounded guardsman while under Taliban fire following an ambush last April.

Abbie, who describes herself as a "girly girl" and is just 5ft 4ins, was also commended for helping to save the lives of six soldiers injured during later grenade attacks.

Abbie was on her first operational tour at the age of just 19, taking her to the more active areas of insurgency in Helmand Province. On a number of occasions she treated traumatically injured soldiers, including a guardsman who had been shot in the chest.

She raced across open ground with the Platoon Sergeant to administer first aid to the injured man, who later died. Due to the severity of the guardsman's wounds, Abbie remained with him throughout the extraction, selflessly exposing herself to enemy fire again, to ensure the clinical handover to the evacuating helicopter crew which would give the stricken soldier the best possible chance of survival.

Abbie, from Haverhill, is the only female in her company – and most of her comrades are over 6ft. The former Samuel Ward Upper School pupil, now aged 20, admits she was terrified by the prospect of going on patrol, making her courage under fire even more remarkable.

She said: "The training is excellent but nothing can fully prepare you for what happens in a combat zone until you experience it first-hand. It was my very first operation and I have never been so scared in my life.

"Nobody can prepare you for being shot at. When you hear the whizz going past your head you think 'what am I doing here?' But you are the medic so you have to get there and save the person's life. I kept him going until he was in better hands. I'm a little girly girl so I didn't think I would achieve anything in the Army."

MEDIC: Army Medic Abbie Martin from Haverhill, who received a bravery award for treating injured soldiers under Taliban fire in Afghanistan

Her citation praised her for "selflessly exposing herself to enemy fire" in order to give her colleague the "best possible chance of survival".

Abbie, who became an Army medic because her father and brother have disabilities, said her family think she is crazy but are incredibly proud of her. Of her award, she said: "It's really nice; I feel proud to have it. The bravery of everyone else and the desire to help kept me going. Every single soldier out there is deserving of an award."

Her citation stated: "Throughout each action, she was steadfast and put her patients before herself despite the dangers."

Air ambulance flies in to aid fall victim

AN air ambulance landed on a recreation ground yesterday morning to bring help to a man who had a fall.

Magpas Helimedix volunteers Dr Nick Scott and paramedics Sally Boor and Simon Standen flew into Haverhill Recreation Ground in Camps Road in the Air Ambulance just after 9am.

They went to a home in Downs Place, Haverhill, after reports that a man in his 60s had fallen.

A Magpas spokesman said:

"The Magpas team assessed the patient who had suffered a leg injury.

"They administered strong pain relief and then sedated the patient, before accompanying him to Addenbrooke's Hospital in a land ambulance.

"On arrival at the hospital, the man was in a stable condition."

Pilot Richard Eastwood and crew member Adam Bright flew in and an ambulance crew were also in attendance at the scene.

Register your vote now for May elections

HUNDREDS of people could miss their chance to vote in local elections this May if they don't take action now.

The warning comes at the beginning of the six-week pre-election period, which starts today. The deadline to register to vote is Wednesday April 17. Residents can contact their local district or borough council or print a registration form from www.aboutmyvote.co.uk. Anyone who will be away can vote by post or proxy.

Deborah Cadman OBE, Suffolk County Council's chief executive and electoral returning officer for Suffolk, said: "Thursday, May 2 is an important opportunity for residents to have their say on how local services are run and how public money is spent. We want everyone eligible to vote to be able to do so.

"Anyone who has moved house in the past few months needs to register with their new address. We also want to remind anyone turning 18 on or before May 2 to make sure they are registered, so they can vote for the first time."

Samantha Mills, at the Electoral Commission, said: "It's your vote – don't lose this chance to use it."

COMPUTER: Fred Faulkner, 89, hands over the computer he made 40 years ago to Jason Fitzpatrick of the Centre for Computing History Fred's computer's a museum piece!

A COMPUTER which a retired engineer made himself more than 40 years ago has been saved from a skip and donated to a computer musuem.

Fred Faulkner, 89, is planning to move nearer family in Stilton this summer and had been clearing out some of the items stored in his bungalow at Mellis Close, Haverhill.

He saw an article about the Centre for Computing History moving from Haverhill to Cambridge and asked if they would like his computer.

Jason Fitzpatrick, the centre's director, said: "We are delighted that Mr Faulkner has decided to donate this key vintage computer – the Transam-Triton – to the centre.

BY JO DEEKS

"Having survived 40 years, since its construction from a kit back in the 70s, Mr Faulkner's computer will be preserved for posterity in its new home."

Widower Fred, who will be 90 in May, but still makes clocks in a workshop at his home. He said: "It would definitely have gone in the skip if I had not seen the article in the paper. They came along and collected it and seemed very pleased with it. I ran my own engineering company and wanted something to control the machines and that is how I got into computers. I still make my own clocks. I think if you have something you enjoy doing, you get your head down and the time goes quickly."

New moves help patients who need free transport to hospital

THE risk of patients missing vital hospital appointments has been reduced after positive talks with NHS chiefs, according to a countywide community transport organisation.

Earlier this year Suffolk Community Transport (SCT) – an umbrella organisation supporting the county's 19 individual community transport operators – raised serious concerns about how the local NHS was assessing people's eligibility for free hospital transport.

Many local groups – including in Haverhill and Newmarket – said its members were pushed to breaking point by the number of people needing to find a way to get to their appointments.

The NHS in Suffolk introduced the single point of assessment in 2011, putting an end to the days when patients were given free access to hospital transport simply by asking their GPs. As a result of the policy, community transport operators across the county saw a huge increase in a demand for their service, and leading to fears many people were at risk of missing appointments as they had no access to transport.

SCT managers have now met with representatives from both the West Suffolk Clinical Commissioning Group and the East Suffolk Clinical Commissioning Group, and say good progress has been made to improve the situation.

Yvonne Chappell, SCT's quality, standards and training manager, who attended the meeting, said: "We fully understand the NHS has to monitor the service it offers so it is not taken advantage of by those who have other means of affordable transport available to them, but we were concerned many people were not receiving the access to hospital transport they were eligible for which meant they were at risk of missing vital appointments.

"Secondly, the increase in demand on our members put them under huge pressure and that is why we called for an urgent meeting.

"We have now had a very productive meeting with representatives from the county's two clinical commissioning groups and we have been given assurances a number of measures have been put in place to improve the situation. We were informed 50 per cent of patients who were originally refused transport have been reassessed and will now receive the transport which they are entitled to."

Gurteen plan may be key to High St car ban

PLANS to redevelop a key town centre site could provide the key to allow pedestrianisation of Haverhill's high street to go ahead after more than four decades of stalemate.

Haverhill Town Council members heard about plans for the Gurteen's Chantry Mill site at their meeting on Tuesday and former town mayor Cllr Maureen Byrne said she was hopeful that they could provide a way forward, by enabling alternative access to the site itself and rear servicing for some adjoining businesses.

Gurteen has operated a textile business on the site since 1784 and the company has always been an opponent of plans to ban all traffic from the High Street between 9am and 4pm, wanting to retain access to the front of the site.

jo.deeks@cambridge-news.co.uk

Suffolk County Council decided to abandon the plan late last year, fearing it would lose a costly public inquiry, but residents of the town showed at a stormy recent meeting that they still favour the plan.

At Tuesday's meeting, consultant Mike Carpenter said the first phase of a redevelopment scheme for the site involved retaining the French Gothic building and red brick buildings fronting the site, but demolishing the big warehouse building at the rear which was of lesser historic and architectural merit. This would allow greater access and more parking, as well as making the remaining buildings more attractive for office use.

He said in difficult economic times it was hard to say what demand there would be, but possible uses discussed included some retail units, as well as a combined museum/antique centre. Some element of planning gain could be involved and it was possible that this might involve providing rear access and linking access to the Cleales car park, to make pedestrianisation a possibility and improve traffic circulation. They would seek Listed Building Consent to demolish some of the buildings before making a planning application.

Town clerk Will Austin said councillors welcome development of the site as part of an expansion of the town centre. Cllr Byrne said demolishing part of Gurteen's wall could resolve the company's objection to the High Street plan. She added: "We were pleasantly surprised by their plans to create a business office hub for Haverhill, and could provide a solution for pedestrianisation."

Runaway lorry ploughs into couple's car

A COUPLE had a narrow escape when a breakdown lorry hit the front of their property.

The vehicle rolled towards the home of pensioners Roy and Margaret Elsdon in Cambridge Way, Haverhill, last Friday afternoon, smashing through the fence. It ploughed into their car which was parked outside, and prevented the vehicle continuing into the house, where Mr Elsdon had been sitting at the time. The lorry, with a car loaded on to the back of it, stopped just short of the front window of the house.

A spokesman for Suffolk Police said the lorry had been recovering another vehicle and it appeared that the handbrake had failed, causing it to roll downhill.

No-one was injured in the incident.

The lorry driver was given a breathalyser test at the scene.

Stuart McFall, aged 47, of Bury Road, Thurlow, will appear at Bury St Edmunds magistrates court on April 9 charged with driving with excess alcohol.

Friday free parking serves no purpose

I HAVE raised the issues below with the leader of St Edmundsbury Borough Council and the portfolio holder for, among other things, parking in St Edmundsbury and with Suffolk County Council (SCC).

Firstly, the free parking on a Friday after 3pm in Haverhill is illogical and doesn't really serve any purpose.

There is also the minimal lost income aspect, and that lost income aspect compared to the car park income in Bury St Edmunds (BSE).

This was also apparent to me on the free parking aspect leading up to Christmas in both towns. Ratio on the lost income aspect between the two towns car parks appears to be in the region of 4-1, when you take into account the charges for BSE compared to Haverhill and the total of car parks in BSE compared to Haverhill. There needs to be some equality here, instead of Haverhill being sold short once again.

The free parking in Haverhill aspect needs looking at further. It would appear also that somebody doesn't really know the habits of residents in Haverhill, or the habits of people with schoolchildren or any children come to that.

Schools finish at about 3pm and most parents have done their trips into town by then, rather than taking their youngsters round the town. The simple reason being that the weekend starts here, after school has finished on a Friday, and most youngsters just want to get home and get out with their friends, with their parents winding down a bit after the week.

Tesco, Sainsbury's and Aldi all offer free parking for their shoppers. The old Co-op store is now empty as we are all aware, which doesn't help.

The Easter holidays are coming up, so there is still the opportunity for some redemption like offering free parking up to 1pm each day during the Easter school holidays in Haverhill and further school holidays.

I am also very surprised that no Haverhill members were consulted on this. Haverhill is not a one-member town.

On the aspect of pedestrianisation of the High Street, I have also put forward a suggestion to SCC, including Cllr McGregor, that as a compromise that Haverhill High Street is shut completely from 10am on a Thursday until 10am on Monday mornings. Then from the Monday morning until the Thursday morning things stay as they are at the present – no access between 10am and 4pm except exempt vehicles. Haverhill High Street is closed on a Saturday anyway for the market, so that would leave the street as it is at the moment for three days and closed for three days.

I have requested that this be tried for a period of six months or longer with an appropriate Traffic Regulation Order. I'd like to point out that I don't favour shared space in streets, but my proposal makes a compromise.

COMMUNITY: Quacking day for Dizzy Ducks

DESPITE the snowy conditions, families came out in force to have fun at a nursery's open day.

Dizzy Ducks Day Nursery and Out of School Club in Homefield Road, Haverhill, hosted the event. Children were delighted by the appearance of characters such as Peppa Pig, Micky Mouse and Ben 10.

Everyone had great fun, making the most of all the Dizzy Ducks facilities, including the sensory room and soft play area.

Mayor of Haverhill Pat Hanlon officially opened the day, followed by a tour of the purpose-built nursery, discussing learning at an early age and child development in a nursery setting.

For more information about Dizzy Ducks, call (01440) 702151 or visit www.dizzyducks.co.uk.

Community News

THE March meeting was well attended by many of us anxious to find out more about the lives of our ancestors who worked the land.

Ian Waller is an expert genealogist and well-known author and he gave a very comprehensive presentation on agricultural labourers and their lives in general. He explained the various laws which changed working conditions and the advance of industry which drew workers from the land and countryside into the cities.

It was helpful to discover that there are many possible records available to trace these workers lives and families. You don't have to be rich or famous to be mentioned in legal documents of many different types, which most local record offices hold in their archives. Following on from this, our next meeting on April 11, will not be at the Old Independent Church hall as usual, but will be a behind the scenes guided tour of Bury St Edmunds Record Office. This starts at 7pm and places can be booked with Alan on (01440) 704157.

University may take research park space

VISION: An artist's impression of the lake planned as a centrepiece for the Haverhill Research Park

HAVERHILL is in line to get university presence after a bid was made for a £2.5 million grant to build an innovation centre at the town's research park.

Work started last autumn on the £100 million Haverhill Research Park, which could create close to 2,000 jobs, and includes business units as well as 150 new homes, a pub and restaurant and a creche.

Developer Carisbrooke Investments has now agreed to form a charitable trust with St Edmundsbury Borough Council, Haverhill Town Council and other public sector stakeholders to develop an innovation centre on the site.

The trust has applied for a Regional Growth Fund grant of £2.5 million to help finance the development. The grant would finance part of the projected £5.9 million cost of the 30,000 sq ft Haverhill Innovation Centre, aimed to form and strengthen links between academia and business.

University Campus Suffolk (UCS) has confirmed that it wishes to take space in the building. Professor Brendon Noble said: "UCS requires vehicles for research outputs. The proposed development would represent one of those vehicles and UCS is in discussion regarding the possibility of developing a footprint on the proposed innovation centre."

The public/private partnership proposal, which would add 300 jobs to the envisaged 1,600 on the research park, has come about following discussions between Carisbrooke, St Edmundsbury Borough Council, Suffolk County Council, UCS and West Suffolk College. The centre would be operated on a not-for-profit basis with any surplus reinvested in its facilities.

And the innovation centre has received support from key figures in East Anglia. Matthew Hancock, MP for West Suffolk, said: "The centre will be a unique asset for the region and the UK more widely and will maximise the economic impact of the enormous scientific expertise in the surrounding area."

"East Anglia has already produced many thriving, innovative start-up businesses. The proposed innovation centre will form the heart of the research park and will offer office space for a range of technology companies, from entrepreneurs and start-ups to larger companies looking to locate satellite offices in the area. This will be hugely valuable in ensuring high-tech growth in the area continues."

Ian Gallin, chief executive of St Edmundsbury Borough Council, said: "St Edmundsbury has suffered from a shortage of incubation space and the provision of such a centre at the Haverhill Research Park will provide the ideal infrastructure for forging links between academia and private enterprises."

Infrastructure work on the 450,000 sq ft Haverhill Research Park is due to be completed this summer and if the grant is successful, the innovation centre could be operational in 2015.

It is well placed to take advantage of other centres of excellence in the region. The site is less than 10 miles from the A11 cluster which incorporates Addenbrooke's, Brabraham Research Campus, Granta Park, Chesterford Research Park and the Wellcome Trust Genome Campus.

Nic Rumsey, the director of Carisbrooke, said says: "The innovation centre will build on the successful model established by other Cambridge developments, notably the St John's Innovation Centre adjacent to the Cambridge Science Park."

"The grant will be of vital importance in helping to pump-prime the innovation centre which wouldn't initially be viable otherwise."

Welding with chocolate is a highlight at science event

WELDING with chocolate and experiments that went off with a bang helped youngsters see the fun side of science.

Hundreds of students from schools across Suffolk went along to the STEM (science, technology, engineering and maths) event at Samuel Ward Academy in Haverhill on Friday.

Speakers from Haverhill companies IFF and Genzyme, as well as Haverhill Science Park, The Welding Institute, Royal Society of Chemistry, University of Cambridge, and chemical engineers were present.

Younger students watched and took part in presentations from The Royal Society of Chemists called 'Whiz, Bang and Smells' and 'Welding with Chocolate'.

Haverbury sets standard in handling complaints

A HOUSING group has won recognition for the way it deals with complaints.

Haverbury Housing Partnership, which manages more than 6,000 homes in Haverhill, Bury St Edmunds and surrounding villages, has been awarded HouseMark's prestigious complaints accreditation for its 'robust, effective and fair' process in dealing with tenants' issues.

Havebury was assessed by the sector's leading performance improvement organisation and had to show compliance in 40 different areas.

HouseMark's report said: "Havebury provides a very good complaints service to its customers. It handles complaints well and ensures a robust investigation that includes a home visit as appropriate."

Sergeant: I'm proud to have served for 21 years

REWARDED: Sgt Sarah Bartley of Haverhill Police receiving her long service award from Lord Tollemache

A SERGEANT who has spent more than two decades with Suffolk Police was among officers presented with long service awards.

Sgt Sarah Bartley, who is based in Haverhill, went along to police headquarters at Martlesham, near Ipswich, to receive her award for 21 years' service.

Sgt Bartley served at Newmarket, Mildenhall, Stowmarket and Bury St Edmunds before coming to Haverhill in 2001.

After receiving her award, she said: "I enjoy working in the town as I feel I really know it well having grown up and gone to school here. I am proud to have served all those 21 years on the front line in uniform."

Also receiving awards were PC Robert Bunton and Special Sergeant Peter Oakley from Haverhill, and Detective

JO DEEKS

Sergeant Helen Sowerby from Newmarket.

More than 35 members of staff and officers from Suffolk Constabulary have received long service medals after completing 20 years service.

The Lord Lieutenant of Suffolk, Lord Tollemache, presented the medals for long service, with the majority being awarded for 20 years.

Also in attendance at the ceremony were Chief Constable Douglas Paxton, Deputy Chief Constable Paul Marshall, Assistant Chief Officer Philip Clayton and Police and Crime Commissioner Tim Passmore.

There were 38 medals awarded for long service, 30 to police officers, five to police staff and three to specials.

Egg hunt boosts new HQ fund

YOUNGSTERS hunting for eggs helped boost a fund for a new Scout and Guide headquarters. The event on Saturday was organised by Haverhill Scout and Guide Association to launch a fundraising project to build new facilities at headquarters in Colne Valley Road. The hunt was open to families across the town, with every child guaranteed an egg.

Man accused of rape is not guilty

A FORMER St John Ambulance superintendent has been cleared of allegations that he repeatedly raped a schoolgirl.

Anthony Farrant, 51, who had denied the charges against him, was found not guilty at Ipswich Crown Court on Thursday, March 21.

After a two-week-long trial, it took the jury of seven women and five men more than five hours to reach their verdicts in relation to 12 charges.

After the verdicts were announced, Mr Recorder Karim Khalil told Farrant, of Eastern Avenue, Haverhill, that he was free to leave the court.

During the two-week trial, Farrant denied allegations that he had repeatedly raped and sexually abused the girl – on up to 40 occasions – over a three-year period.

The court heard the girl make those allegations in a 90-minute recorded interview in which she

BY JO DEEKS

claimed most had taken place at an address in the town. It was suggested that she self-harmed in order to make herself less attractive to Farrant.

Giving evidence, Farrant said that none of the incidents had ever taken place. He said he had a medical condition which precluded him from having sex until at least an hour after he had taken prescribed medication.

Farrant said that on one occasion when the girl claimed she had been raped by him in a lane in Haverhill, he had given her a lift in his car but said nothing inappropriate had taken place.

He strongly denied raping the girl, who cannot be named for legal reasons. He said that he had delivered her safely to her home.

Asked by defence barrister Jonathan Goodman if he had ever raped, sexually abused or taken indecent photographs of the girl, Farrant replied: "No, certainly not."

Allegations that he had made threats about what would happen to the girl if she told anyone what was alleged to have happened were untrue, he said, as were claims that he had injured her.

Farrant told the jury that when police arrived at his home in February last year to question him in connection with the girl's allegations he had been shocked.

He said that he heard the claims against him with "utter disbelief" and said it had seemed surreal.

The court heard that the girl who made the allegations suffered from emotional problems and had developed anorexia and had self harmed.

Farrant was found not guilty of six charges of rape, three of oral rape, two of assault by penetration and one of sexual assault.

Together until the end: dementia could never separate my parents

POWERFUL READING: in her book, Chris Carling recalls caring for her parents who both suffered from dementia and spent their last years together in a nursing home

Chris Carling watched both her parents succumb to dementia. But even in the care home, they'd still 'sit together and fall asleep holding hands'. Interview by ALICE RYAN CURLED up tightly in his armchair, in an almost foetal position, Chris Carling's elderly father was wracked with grief.

'I haven't got a wife', he told her. 'My life is over.' After almost seven decades of marriage, his wife had just left home for good – without so much as a backward glance.

Both Chris's parents were suffering from dementia. Her mum, Mary, had been admitted to hospital, with a care home the inevitable next step. Her dad, Fred, was still at home, but not coping.

"When I saw him there, all curled up, I just wanted to cradle him in my arms, to scoop him up – which is what I did," says Chris. "I was a daddy's girl; this was my dad..."

"I realised he wasn't the same dad any more, that, in a strange way, I was the grown-up now. He had always protected me; now it was my turn to protect him."

Both Fred and Mary battled dementia for several years before they died well into their 90s. He was diagnosed with vascular dementia, while she had Alzheimer's.

"I still can't quite believe that my parents have both died, that I'm an orphan," admits Chris, who lives in Cambridge. "I really, really miss them both. One thing I really want to get across is that a diagnosis of dementia in someone elderly isn't the end, rather it's the start of a new chapter. Yes, there will be very difficult times – but some good things can come out of it too."

"Family relationships can be hard; it can be difficult to express your feelings. But when verbal communication becomes a problem, you're more likely to hug someone, or to hold their hand – to do things which, in ordinary life, you might not do so much."

A personal and business coach, Chris has written a book about her experience of caring for her parents. Called But Then Something Happened: A Story of Everyday Dementia, it is part-narrative, part-handbook; alongside the autobiography, she has written a sequence of 'mini-dramas', scenes highlighting key symptoms of dementia, and drawn a series of conclusions, titled 'Learning from dementia: Losses and (a few) gains'.

The book is powerful stuff, provoking both tears and laughter by turns. "We did have some very funny moments: there's always been a lot of laughter in my family," smiles Chris. "Getting my mum to provide a urine sample, for example, was hilarious: I squatted there, holding the bottle, saying 'Come on Mum! Just a dribble!' but nothing was happening. We both ended up in fits."

But Then Something Happened is also, in part, a love story. "Even near the end, their faces lit up when they saw each other," says Chris. "They ended up in the same unit of the care home and they'd sit together and fall asleep holding hands. Despite everything, something of their relationship was retained."

Fred and Mary met in their teens. Encouraged by Chris to write a journal in his 80s, Fred recalled meeting his future wife: "At 17 I met a 17½-year-old blonde haired beauty – love at first sight – I was off my food for days. She really was beautiful, very fair. Now, a million years later, I still think the same of her."

The couple married, settled in their native North East and had two children – Chris and her brother Alan. Demobbed from the RAF at the end of the war, Fred joined ICI and it was his job that brought the family south, to Bristol, when Chris was just 12.

"My mum always said 'The thing about your dad is that he can always make me laugh'; in the early days, he was definitely the joker in the relationship. He would often write her notes, little cards... He was the romantic, while she was more of a realist."

It wasn't until Fred retired that the couple relocated to Cambridge. "That was actually because of me. My husband is a fellow at Clare, and I always thought being a porter was a nice job. When Dad retired in his early 60s, a porter's job came up – and he got it. He loved that job – it was very sociable – and everybody loved him."

Although they'd had a few health niggles, Chris's parents arrived in their late 80s reasonably fit and well. But then Fred began to endure bouts of depression; the first sign, looking back, of vascular

The second most common form of dementia, it's caused by problems with the supply of blood to the brain. Depression and anxiety are common symptoms, along with loss of concentration and communication skills. It is thought to develop in a 'step change' pattern: plateaus followed by sudden marked deteriorations.

Followed by dementia, on the other hand, was Alzheimer's. The most common form of dementia, it's thought to be caused by so-called 'plaques' and 'tangles' in the brain which, in turn, cause brain cells to atrophy. Key repercussions are memory loss, mood swings and breakdown of bodily functions, from speech to continence. Decline is more gradual; a smoother downward curve.

"From personal experience, I'd say someone with vascular dementia retains more awareness, certainly at the beginning. My dad certainly felt the loss, of his own abilities and of my mum's, far more acutely.

"Whereas my mum was really quite happy in herself. She'd always hated going to the doctor – she put off having cataract surgery until she was almost blind – but then when she was admitted to hospital, when she collapsed on what I call our 'crisis weekend', she seemed quite happy about it, laughing and joking with the doctors and nurses.

"She wasn't as aware of her surroundings; she had no framework left to work within. I remember her saying to me 'I can't make a picture'... But she was interested in her environment and wanted to explore it; in that way she was quite like a small child."

Mary and Fred had been 'muddling along' in their own home, with Chris providing plentiful practical help, for some years. But then, within the space of 48 hours in the summer of 2007, it became clear the situation was untenable. What started with a sore and swollen knee ended up with Mary falling on the sitting room floor and being stranded there for hours: "My dad had made her lunch and taken it to her on the floor, but not thought to call anyone.

"We hadn't realised, until that moment, how serious the situation had become."

Incontinent, Mary was also sitting in her own mess; Chris had to lift her off the floor, give her a flannel bath and change her clothes. "She left that house, her home for 30 years, with nothing but the clothes she was wearing and a few toiletries. At that time, I didn't know she wouldn't be coming back; I think my dad realised that well before I did. Mum didn't even give a backward glance.

"There's no doubt that my dad found that hard. He'd never been alone in his life: he'd gone from being looked after by his mum to being looked after by his wife."

Eventually, it was decided a care home – Langdon House in Cambridge – was the best and safest place for both Chris's parents. They stayed there until they died. "It was a beautiful place for them to be. You hear a lot of bad things about care homes, but my parents were treated with nothing but love and respect at Langdon House, right up until the last minute."

Fred's passing, aged 93, was, says Chris, 'pretty peaceful'. "It was a shock that he died, because he hadn't been physically ill for ages. But there was an element of release: it's very hard to see someone you love suffering, day after day, because they no longer want to be in this world. There was a moment, shortly before he died, when I looked over at him and he suddenly looked like my dad again; something about his manner made me think 'Yes! That's my dad'. I'm grateful I had that moment."

Mary's death, at 95, was, Chris remembers, 'far more difficult'. She had, she explains, found a new kind of closeness with her mum. And, fun loving to the last, her mum was still happy in herself.

"I think my mother wanted me to be perfect, but I was a bit rebellious – I had boyfriends she didn't like, that kind of thing. But, in an odd way, with the dementia she came into her own.

"She ended up needing a hoist, but she thought of it like a swing, which she rather enjoyed. And she was still capable of making jokes: one birthday, I asked her how old she was and she said '100'. I said 'You know that's not true: you're 92'. Her response? 'You have to be able to tell lies sometimes'. She still had a good quality of life."

Fred and Mary made their platinum wedding anniversary; though Fred slept through all the celebrations, Chris says it was 'a happy day for mum: she loved being centre of attention'.

Despite the ups and downs of her parents' last years, Chris says she doesn't feel angry that they both battled dementia. "Things are how they are, and you just have to get on with it. And there were kindnesses: after 70 years of marriage, neither of them was actually bereaved – by the time my dad died, my mum's Alzheimer's was so far progressed she wasn't aware.

"My dad always knew me, but I'm sure there were times when my mum didn't know who I was. I coped by telling myself the next time I saw her, she would know."

Writing But Then Something Happened, which grew from a 'dementia diary' Chris began on that 'crisis weekend', was, she adds, 'a kind of catharsis': "Turning our story into a narrative allowed me to process it, I think."

Chris was also keen to extend a helping hand to other people dealing with a parent's dementia, hence the handbook element.

"My advice to anyone in a similar situation would be to accept the person for who they are now, instead of constantly comparing them to the person they used to be.

"Being with someone when they're at their most vulnerable is actually a kind of privilege: there's no pretending any more, no agenda. In a funny kind of way, it's actually very special."

Expert to unveil Ripper secrets at town show

A RETIRED police murder squad detective and leading Ripper expert is promising to reveal startling new results during a visit to Haverhill.

Trevor Marriott has spent the past decade conducting a cold case reinvestigation into the Whitechapel murders of 1888 which were attributed to a feared killer known as Jack the Ripper. Mr Marriott visits Haverhill Arts Centre on Thursday, April 4.

For the past 125 years the mystery has captivated the imagination of people worldwide. There have been more than 100 books published and numerous films and television documentaries. Many have dramatised and distorted the facts to the point that the public now accepts the fiction more readily.

Mr Marriott has now concluded his long and protracted cold-case investigation, with startling results which have now completely dispelled many of the original theories readily accepted as fact for 125 years.

It was generally accepted that the

jo.deeks@cambridge-news.co.uk

killer murdered only five prostitutes between August and November 1888. However, Marriott uncovered other murders outside of those dates both in London and in the USA and Germany.

This led to a new suspect emerging who had never been mentioned before who had been arrested for committing a Ripper-like murder in the USA.

His ongoing investigation could disprove the accepted theory that the killer, after killing some of the victims, removed vital organs from their bodies at the crime scenes taking them away with him.

Further investigative work uncovered secret Metropolitan Police Special Branch records never made public before, in which four new suspects are named as well as eliminating a number of the "prime suspects" who have been investigated over the years.

Mr Marriott now believes that not all of the Whitechapel murders were committed by the same killer, and that Jack the Ripper may have been nothing more than a myth created by sensational journalism at the time of the murders.

Jack the Ripper – A 21st Century Investigation is a two-hour show hosted by Mr Marriott in which he describes his lengthy investigation and discloses the new startling results.

The show is touring the UK throughout 2013 to mark the 125th anniversary of the Whitechapel murders.

The one-man show is packed with pictures from 1888 showing original crime scene photographs of the victims, the suspects, together with many other original photographs from 1888 relative to the murders.

Some of these photographs are of a graphic nature, which some people may find disturbing.

The Haverhill show starts at 7.30pm, with tickets £10 and £8 concessions, available from the box office by phoning (01440) 714140 or from the website at www.haverhillartscentre.co.uk.

Poplar Farm Riding Stables celebrates 18th anniversary

A RIDING school is celebrating its 18th year in business – catering for riders of all ages.

Kay Burtenshaw and her husband Philip moved from Saffron Walden to take over the Poplar Farm Riding Stables at Brockley Green, Hundon, on March 1, 1995. Many other riding schools have come and gone over the years and Kay believes they are still around because of the high standards they offer.

She said: "It was a childhood dream of mine to run my own stables. Over the years I had worked for some well-known people in the show world and I used to teach for the Pony Club.

"The school is approved by the British Horse Society and all our instructors are qualified. To be approved by the BHS, you are subject to spot checks to make sure that everything is done properly. We are properly insured and we have very high Health and Safety standards, as we have for all these years.

"People are in safe hands if they come here. We start with 4-year-olds, right up to people in their 60s. It is never too late, you can start from the beginning here and work right through to showing or competing. Many of our horses have been with us for years and they are all well trained. The five girls who work here all have their own horses and all compete with them."

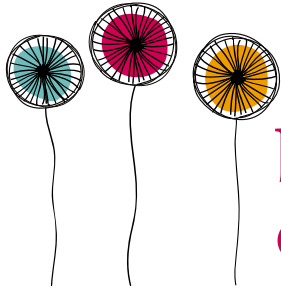

There are 15 horses used in the riding school, with a total of 48 in the stables, including some bred at Poplar Farm and others using its licensed livery yard. The indoor school has a heated gallery to watch lessons from. The school offers popular 'Own A Pony' days, when youngsters muck out, feed, saddle and care for a horse, as well as pony parties. Side saddle and carriage driving lessons are also available.

Chocs away for students' dinner

BY JO DEEKS

jo.deeks@cambridge-news.co.uk

STUDENTS dressed the part as they served up a Charlie and the Chocolate Factory themed dinner.

The dinner, inspired by Roald Dahl's classic children's story, was served in Zest the Restaurant at West Suffolk College – and received glowing praise from diners.

Second-year BTEC hospitality students planned the event for a business enterprise module as part of their course.

The students represented different characters from the film, including Aaron Johnson from Haverhill, who was Willy Wonka.

Diner Alison Dodsley said: "The service was fantastic. The students who served our table were polite, attentive and seemed genuinely pleased to be involved in the event."

"The atmosphere, décor and costumes made the event informal and fun. The students are a real credit to the college and to themselves."

College principal Dr Ann Williams said: "It must have been quite a challenge to find a menu with quite so much chocolate. The students did a really brilliant job with the costumes and were very brave in wearing all of that make-up. They carried it off well.

"They were all really courteous and enthusiastic, and there was a wonderful sense of pride and achievement, which was well deserved."

The six students involved with the planning and managing of the event will each donate their share of the profit to a charity of their choice.

Hospitality lecturer Andrew Adamson said: "Congratulations to the students on a very successful event."

"It was planned with so much detail and the service was really well executed. They can be very proud of themselves."

"This was an ambitious project. It was fantastic to see all four year groups working together as one team."

BARNARDISTON HALL SPORTS SCHOLARSHIPS 2013

Open to girls and boys in current Years 3 and 4 who have an outstanding and proven sporting ability and would be interested in playing hockey (girls and boys) or rugby (boys only) to a high standard.

The Scholarships will be worth at least 50% of fees with the possibility of up to a 100% reduction by way of a means-tested bursary.

Barnardiston Hall has a long-standing reputation for excellence in sport, academia, music, drama and art.

The Specialist Learning Support Department offers pupils with dyslexia, and other learning disabilities, the highest level of support whilst our A and B Sets ensure all pupils are stretched to the maximum of their ability with many awarded scholarships to senior schools each year.

Barnardiston Hall Preparatory School is delighted to announce the launch of 6 Sports Scholarships from September 2013.

The Headmaster, Mr Tim Dodgson says, "Many of our pupils are members of sporting clubs in the area and we recognise that there is a huge amount of sporting talent out there. Barnardiston Hall has first-class sports coaches and last year we opened a £½ million, floodlit astro turf which has further enhanced our facilities."

The Headmaster further commented, "Previous pupils at the School have gone on to represent the county and England and we are hoping to give the same opportunity to children in the area whose parents may not have previously considered sending their child to an independent school."

All applicants will be invited to a training morning at the School and parents will be invited to come along for a chat with the Headmaster and a brief tour of the facilities.

OPEN DAYS 2013

You may like to visit us individually. However, our doors will be open for Open Days on the following days:

MAN OF MANY PARTS: Roger McGough, left, interprets Moliere's The Misanthrope at Cambridge Arts Theatre, running until Saturday at 7.45pm (Thurs/Sat matinees 2.30pm). Tickets £15 -27. Contact: (01223) 503333 or www.cambridgeartstheatre.com

ROGER McGough is a man of many parts and, although he is now 75, seems to be leading a professional life that's busier than ever.

He's a working poet, putting in regular writing hours at his desk, and remains a tireless evangelist for the form, both as a presenter of Poetry Please, Radio Four's long-running poetry request programme, and on stage, where he gives regular readings of his work to highly appreciative audiences.

His cultured Liverpoolian tones can also be heard voicing a number of TV ads and, in recent years, he has formed a very successful partnership with a fellow-writer who's been dead for over three centuries – Jean-Baptiste Poquelin, better known as Moliere.

McGough's sparkling version of Moliere's Tartuffe was one of the biggest hits of Liverpool's year as the European City of Culture in 2008, and enjoyed a successful run at Cambridge Arts Theatre a few years later.

He followed with a new version of Moliere's The Hypochondriac – and is now dipping his quill into The Misanthrope, Moliere's classic mockery of manners and morals set amid 17th century French aristocracy.

Considered by many to be the playwright's best work, The Misanthrope again joins the creative forces of McGough, director Gemma Bodinetz and English Touring Theatre to complete their tricolour of Moliere comedies.

Poet Alceste is disgusted with French society. Powdered fops gossip in code and bejewelled coquettes whisper behind fans wherever he looks. In pursuit of honesty, he embarks on a one-man crusade against forked-tongues, frippery and fakery. But could the woman he has fallen in love with be the worst culprit of all? And in this artificial world will his revolution prove just revolting?

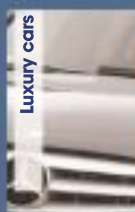

"I've been looking into Moliere's life, including Bulgakov's biography of him, and I think I would have liked him, had I met him," McGough said.

But now he's done three Molières, it suggests he has a bit of an affinity with him...

"I do seem to have an affinity," McGough admitted; "Catholicism and guilt!"

■ The Killing of Sister George, ADC Theatre, until Saturday at 7.45pm. Tickets are £10 from (01223) 300085 or see www.adctheatre.com

Special evening

WORLD-FAMOUS cellist Julian Lloyd Webber is joining forces with the acclaimed European Union Chamber Orchestra for a special concert in Cambridge.

The event at the Corn Exchange on Tuesday, April 16 is one of the best selling concerts in the 2012/13 Cambridge Classical Concert Series.

The richly varied programme begins with Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Cellos. Mr Lloyd Webber, artist-in-residence at the Corn Exchange, said: "I'm performing this piece alongside my wife Jiaxin Cheng. She is a very fine cellist and I'm really looking forward to this. It will be a special evening for me."

This evening continues with Elgar's Serenade for Strings, the piece he singled out as his personal favourite of all his compositions.

written in the city. Eric Whitacre was inspired to compose the lush, pastoral The River Cam during his daily riverside walks from Cambridge to Newnham when he was a visiting fellow at Sidney Sussex College in 2010.

Whitacre is one of the most popular and often-performed composers of modern times. His first album as both composer and conductor, Light & Gold, won a Grammy in 2012, reaped five-star reviews and became the number one classical album in the US and UK charts within a week of release.

The European Union Chamber Orchestra, under the assured conducting of Hans-Peter Hoffman, will bring out all the subtle complexities and exquisite melodies of Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings. Haunting and ethereal, audiences will instantly recognise it as the soundtrack from the Oscar-nominated film Amélie.

The evening draws to a close with a spirited performance of Schubert's fresh and lyrical Symphony No. 5, considered by some to be the best of his early symphonies, richly textured and brimming with melodic playfulness.

At 6pm in the Guildhall, on the opposite side of the road and less than a minute away from the Corn Exchange, concert ticket holders will be able to enjoy a pre-concert talk by Julian Lloyd Webber, hosted by the Cambridge Classical Concert Series' Patron Dr Nigel Brown OBE. It offers an insight into Mr Lloyd Webber, his time as artist-in-residence at the Corn Exchange, and the pieces he will be playing later that evening.

Tickets (from £20) can be booked via the Cambridge Corn Exchange box office on (01223) 357851 or online at www.cornex.co.uk

SHIMMY along to the Arts Centre on Saturday for One Night With Elvis, a tribute by Wesley Presley and the Aloha Band and Singers. Wesley sings all the Elvis classics with the quality, range and power that made Presley such a phenomenon. From 8pm.

The identity of the killer known as Jack the Ripper has long remained a mystery but now, through Trevor Marriott's long and protracted 12-year re-investigation of these crimes, new evidence challenges our understanding of the case and casts major doubt on many of the original and accepted theories. In Jack The Ripper: A 21st Century Investigation on Thursday April 4 at 7.30pm, Trevor asks if in the 125th anniversary year of these horrific murders, can Jack the Ripper finally be identified? Recommended for ages 15-plus.

The Three Billy Pigs by Noisy yster on Friday April 5 at 2pm blends two classic fairy tales with beautifully crafted puppets, light-hearted storytelling, live music and a little bit of eco-awareness. Finding Nemo 3D (U, 96 mins)

TEN years after it was first released, Pixar's hugely entertaining comedy swims back into cinemas in the 3D format – and it is still the cinematic catch of the day.

Eye-popping visuals and a superb script, crammed to the gills with laugh-out-loud gags, combine to stunning effect in this hugely entertaining and wildly inventive fable set beneath the ocean waves.

The conversion to 3D has been lovingly overseen by Pixar supremo John Lasseter and the underwater environments look stunning with the added depth of vision.

You can almost feel fish swimming around you as the camera glides along coral reefs or sinks into the blue beyond and a forest of dead jellyfish.

Marlin (voiced by Albert Brooks) is a neurotic clownfish who has never recovered emotionally from a barracuda attack, which claimed the lives of his wife and all but one of his unborn children.

When his one surviving son, Nemo (Alexander Gould), is plucked from the Great Barrier Reef by a diver and re-housed in a fish tank in a dentist's waiting room, Marlin embarks on an epic adventure to bring the youngster home.

The clownfish is aided by a friendly blue tang called Dory (Ellen DeGeneres), who suffers from short-term memory loss, travelling through shark-infested waters to be reunited with his boy.

Meanwhile, Nemo hatches a daring escape from the crowded aquarium with the help of the other residents, including a Moorish Idol called Gill (Willem Dafoe), a hygiene-obsessed shrimp called Jacques (Joe Ranft) and a starfish called Peach (Allison Janney).

Finding Nemo is still computer-animated perfection. Brooks plays his compulsive-obsessive father with sensitivity and dry wit, such as when he frets that none of his children will like him and his wife replies, "Marlin, there are 400 eggs, I'm pretty sure one of them will like you."

The animation is jaw-dropping. Sly visual jokes and rich detail are crammed into every water-logged frame, including a Buzz Lightyear action figure in the dentist's office.

Before the main feature, there is an uproariously funny new Toy Story short called Partysaurus Rex in which the fun-loving green plastic dinosaur helps a gang of bath toys to stage a rave in a bubble bath.

Pixar certainly knows how to spoil us.

Prune for great roses

THEY are the quintessential English plant, with unrivalled fragrance, beauty and variety of colours, shapes and sizes.

Little wonder, then, that many gardeners are baffled as to when to actually prune their roses to ensure a flurry of gorgeous flowers in the summer and beyond.

The best time to prune autumn and winter-planted roses and established bushes is early spring, when growth is just beginning and the uppermost buds are swelling but no leaves have appeared.

The traditional method involves cutting out all dead wood and diseased or damaged stems, removing branches which are rubbing against each other and aiming for an open-centred bush.

Then cut out all unripe stems – if the thorns bend or tear rather than snapping off cleanly, the wood is unripe.

You should be left with about six key stems that define the shape of your rose bush. For hybrid teas, otherwise known as modern bush

by Hannah Stephenson

roses, cut back each of these stems by at least half. For other shrub roses, prune lightly so they don't become top-heavy.

Also watch for suckers, vigorous growths which emerge from a point low down on the plant, close to the root system. If you leave them, they can choke the plant or reduce its vigour. Suckers are easy to identify because they have different leaves and growth habit. Just pull them off, as cutting encourages them, as does hoeing around the base.

If it's really cold, you can leave pruning as late as early April, which means that your plants will flower slightly later than usual.

Rose connoisseur Edward Enfield, father of comedian Harry Enfield and former member of the Royal National Rose Society, once told me of an experiment in which one group of rose bushes was pruned lightly, another group heavily and a third hacked with a hedge cutter – and those hacked off with the hedge cutter did the best.

Hard pruning, when stems are cut back to three or four buds from the base, is recommended for newly planted rose bushes, while moderate pruning, where stems are cut back to about half their length, is advised for hybrid tea bushes growing in ordinary soils.

Whatever you do, don't forget to prune your roses because the flowers grow at the tips of the stems, so if you don't shorten those stems the blooms will end up at the top of the plant where you can't see them, and the stems will become a maze of twiggy bits.

ROSE WORK: Many gardeners are baffled as to when to prune their roses – but it doesn't have to be rocket science

Your Homesnow Guide to Moving Home

Moving home can be a complicated business and in the hectic run up to the big day it is all too easy to forget something vital. The Homesnow team offers their readers this handy checklist to help avoid any major pitfalls. We suggest you tick them off as you go....

www.homesnow.co.uk

1 4-2 WEEKS TO GO:

- ☐ Packing – start packing and sorting through your belongings. Now is a good time to de-clutter and pack items rarely used. Make sure you have plenty of sturdy boxes, bubble wrap and sticky tape.
- ☐ Removal companies – get estimates from removal companies, checking that comprehensive insurance cover is available against damage or loss. Is there a packing and unpacking service? Confirm the date of your move with the firm you have chosen.
- ☐ Insurance – check on your home contents insurance policies to ensure that you are covered for the move, and covered at your new address.

Mitsubishi unveils all-new Mirage

MITSUBISHI Motors in the UK is pleased to confirm the long awaited arrival of the all-new Mitsubishi Mirage.

The Mitsubishi Mirage is an A-segment car that's stylish, well-equipped and practical. Mitsubishi Motors has completely reviewed the small car concept to deliver a rational, no-nonsense product with the quality and reliability for which Mitsubishi is so well-known. Lighter, faster and with impeccable environmental credentials, this is one Mirage that's very real – and very much a car of its time.

There's no doubt buyers will be impressed with how Mirage looks from the outside – and they'll love the inside too. The airy and comfortable cabin cocoons its occupants in a pleasant, well-designed and above all, safe, environment. Mirage is constructed using Mitsubishi's 'RISE' safety body design – Reinforced Impact Safety Evolution – and involves the use of a massively strong monocoque structure made from ultra-high tensile steel.

The Mirage: Mitsubishi is rightly proud of its new supermini.

The body is designed to ensure maximum crash protection from all angles and directs impact forces away from the occupants. Although certain parts of the car might be damaged in any impact, the passengers will remain within a steel safety cell. Impact testing showed Mirage has the highest collision safety among its class in Japan.

In addition, all Mirage variants have as standard:

- Driver's SRS front airbag
- Passenger's SRS front airbag with cut-off switch
- Drivers & passenger's side & curtain airbags
- ABS with EBD
- Active Stability Control (ASC) with Traction Control
- Hill-start assist (CVT only)
- Brake assist system
- Emergency Stop

System (ESS)

- Child protection rear door locks
- Engine immobiliser
- Daytime running lights
- RISE occupant protection

Under the bonnet, the Mirage is powered by a new generation of lightweight and compact petrol engines. For UK buyers, there are two alternatives: a frugal, low-friction 1.0-litre on Mirage 1; and a 1.2-litre three-cylinder engine for Mirages 2 & 3. Auto Stop & Go will be standard on the 1.2-litre engine.

Mirage 1, 2 and 3 are available with a five-speed manual transmission while a CVT auto option is available on the top-specification Mirage 3. The 1.0-litre unit produces 71PS with 88Nm of torque while the 1.2 variant produces 80PS with 106Nm of torque.

The Mirage is equipped with the full palette of low CO2 technologies in addition to:

- Auto Stop & Go
- Regenerative braking
- High-efficiency alternator
- Intelligent battery sensor

■ 165/65R14 low-friction tyres.

The car also has a clever three-bar 'Eco Drive Assist' display in the instrument cluster which gives a visual indication of how economically the vehicle is being driven based on current fuel consumption and vehicle speed.

Hope's injury sours the day for Haverhill

A BROKEN leg suffered by Gavin Hope saw Haverhill Rugby Club's match on Saturday brought to a premature end.

Haverhill were trailing 29-0 to Broadlands-Great Yarmouth in the Greene King IPA Eastern Counties League, Division Two match, when the incident occurred after an hour's play.

The scrum-half broke his right fibula after a collision with team-mate Michael Lansdown. The result will stand.

Haverhill, who are fifth in the table, are without a match this Saturday and return to action on April 6, when they are scheduled to host bottom club Mildenhall Red Lodge in their final league match of the season.

Elsewhere on Saturday, the weather took its toll on the sporting fixtures, with snow making pitches unplayable across the area.

Haverhill Rovers were due to travel to Wivenhoe in the Thurlow Nunn League, Premier Division, but the match was postponed. They are scheduled to host Diss on Saturday before travelling to Hadleigh for a Bank Holiday Monday fixture.

Matches involving Haverhill Sports Association and West Wrating were also called off.

The Puckeridge Hunt's annual meeting at Horseheath Point-to-Point course was also called off on Saturday. It has been rescheduled for Saturday, April 27.

Keith McCallum was the overall winner of the Men's IFF Challenge with a score of 40 points, which also saw his handicap cut by two.

He also won Division Three by seven points from Mark Wells as Paul Mower finished third with 30.

Medal delight for debut duo

TWO members of Chalkstone Karate Club returned from the East of England Open Karate Championships with medals – on their first taste of competition. Nicky Coulter won third place in the over-16 female kata and Marie Kicks was third in the over-30 open kata at the event in Clacton on Sea. Kata is a preset sequence of moves, and competitors are marked by three judges.

These scores are then added together to give a total. Both Chalkstone competitors were delighted to have won trophies. They are pictured above, with Coulter on the left and Kicks on the right. The club meets on Tuesdays from 7pm. For more information, visit www.chalkstonekarateclub.co.uk or from call instructor Steve Hart on 07747 063981.

Horscroft's chance on the big stage

SAMUEL Ward Academy student Alex Horscroft is preparing to take his place on the national stage.

Horscroft won the under-16 Suffolk Schools Table Tennis Championships to earn a place at the national finals in Doncaster on April 20.

Players from more than 50 counties will be battling it out at four different age groups.

As well as the titles, there are places in the English Schools team at stake, with selectors picking a side to take part in the Invitation International in June, against teams from Guernsey, Ireland, Isle of Man, Scotland and Wales.

Tag tournament a hit

CASTLE Manor Academy hosted a Primary Tag Rugby tournament for Year 6 pupils.

In wintry conditions, mixed squads from Place Farm Primary Academy, St Felix, Clements, Stanley Drapkin, Thurlow and Hundon played a round-robin tournament of five matches each.

Coaches from Haverhill Rugby Club gave up some of their time to referee and provide some coaching tips to the participants, while sports leaders from Castle Manor Academy supported all the teams and managed the scoring.

All teams participated with determination in more than two hours of near constant physical activity, with Stanley Drapkin winning and St Felix narrowly beating Place Farm Primary Academy to second place by one point.
